May 5, 2016 (BOYERTOWN, PA) - ClimeCo Corporation is pleased to announce its selection as Project Developer of the Year by the Climate Action Reserve, in recognition for registering the most new projects with the Reserve in 2015.

The Climate Action Reserve, North America's premier carbon offset registry, presented the 2015 Project Developer of the Year Award to ClimeCo Corporation today during the Reserve's Navigating the American Carbon World (NACW) annual conference held in San Diego, CA. Award recipients are nominated based upon demonstration of leadership to advance climate solutions and strengthen carbon markets through the development of successful carbon offset projects that achieve real, additional, and permanent emissions reductions.

"ClimeCo has demonstrated tremendous commitment, expertise, and use of resources to develop and implement successful carbon offset projects that adhere to the Climate Action Reserve's regulatory-quality standards and earn high quality offsets. ClimeCo's outstanding efforts will continue to achieve significant emissions reductions to benefit our climate," commented Gillian Calof, Interim President of the Climate Action Reserve.

ClimeCo Corporation added eight new projects to the Reserve's registry list in 2015 under a number of project types, such as the capture and destruction of methane emissions from agricultural operations, organic waste composting, the destruction of ozone-depleting refrigerants, as well as the avoidance of emissions from Nitric Acid production.

"We're pleased that the exponential growth of ClimeCo Corporation is reflected in this recognition from the Reserve," stated ClimeCo president and CEO William Flederbach. "Our team has worked tirelessly to bring new carbon offset projects to market, and we will continue to bring carbon market expertise, together with comprehensive financing and project development, to help realize real greenhouse gas emissions reductions and help organizations meet their carbon neutrality commitments."
